

Master in Literature

The Master in Literature program is aimed at professionals in the areas of art, literature, humanities and philosophy willing to obtain specialized training in literary research. Similarly to other professionals who have appropriate training or perform leveling literary studies to enter the program. The Master, corresponding to its field of study that is Latin American literature, promotes an approach that integrates the specificity of the literary phenomenon with multiple viewing of the world through the knowledge of other disciplines, particularly philosophy.

We present a predominance of literary studies, as determined by the nature of the program, from a discipline axis –Latin American literature-, serves as core for reflection, study and research.

Master studies lead to the development of a research project, starting from the first semester, so that sufficient expertise is acquired in a coordinated manner in the different areas and levels of the four academic semesters.

Objective

Create a space for literary research, through learning to master relevant library resources, to appropriate specific methodology for the study of literature and to receive the advice and direction in the research work.

Fuente: <http://www2.utp.edu.co/english/masters/79/master-in-literature>